A Sending Blessing to Migrant Workers

Children of God,
The Lord of the Nations has brought you here and he has protected you through many challenges.

Even though you might be invisible to those around you, remember that the Creator sees you. And even though you might not be able to express yourself in a new language, remember that the Creator hears you.

So go now, and extend his love through the work you do.

Embracing those who don't look like you
Serving those who may persecute you
Seeking justice wherever God takes you

Keep your head high and your heart soft
Knowing that you belong regardless of where you are.
Because in the kingdom of the One who called you, nobody is a stranger.

Written for the Worship for Workers Project of Fuller Seminary by Gustavo Santos from Vancouver, British Columbia